

Dr. Annine van der Meer short personal Curriculum Vitae

Dr. Annine van der Meer is a historian, theologian and symbolist. She has written several authoritative books on the hidden history of the feminine and of women and their forgotten contribution to evolution and civilization, digging Her-Story out from under His-Story in order to write Our-Story. Where necessary, she balances the established image of woman and man for the purpose of achieving equality, harmony, balance and peace for the world. In 2008 she set up the Pansophia Foundation as a school of Wisdom in the 21st century, where the raising of consciousness, spirituality and empowerment of women are combined. As a speaker, Annine is very much in demand both in the Netherlands and internationally. She lectures comprehensively on women's studies all over the world in an integrated and interdisciplinary manner.

Dr. Annine van der Meer longer, personal Curriculum Vitae

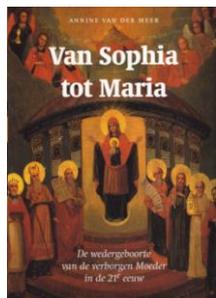

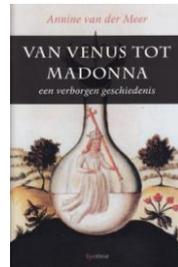

Dr. Annine van der Meer (1953) took her finals from grammar school in Hilversum, the Netherlands, in 1972. Subsequently, from 1972 till 1979, she studied History at the University of Utrecht, specialising in Medieval Church History and Contemporary History. In 1975 she attended a lecture by Prof. Dr. Gilles Quispel, who taught History of Early Christianity at the University of Utrecht. Prof. Quispel, a world-renowned specialist in Gnosticism, had been involved in translating and editing the Nag Hammadi Library after its discovery in Egypt in 1945. He had bought the Jung Codex, containing the Gospel of Truth, for the Jung Institute in Zürich. He also contributed to the translation of the Gospel of Thomas, the so called Fifth Gospel which contained a very ancient text-tradition from the oldest Christian community in Jerusalem.

In his 1975 lecture, Quispel taught his students about the hidden Wife of God, Sophia, who was then unknown to mainstream Christianity, but whose existence was still familiar to Jewish and Gnostic Christians. This first encounter was an eye-opener for Annine. It moved her deeply, and she became fascinated by Sophia/Asherah. From then on, in addition to her history studies, she started to read Theology at the University of Utrecht. From 1975 onwards, she studied the Judeo-Christian and Gnostic traditions in ancient Christianity, in which Sophia is still known. She also studied the history of early and high medieval religious currents, especially in the field of women studies. She wrote a Bachelor- and Masters thesis on ancient Christianity and its ascetic and heretic links with Early and High Medieval Christianity. After her Masters thesis in 1979, Quispel asked her to write a Doctoral thesis under his supervision. Having become increasingly interested in the Gnostic Sophia, her Christian priestesses and in this lost female tradition in texts and rituals, Annine was most glad about this opportunity and grabbed it with both hands. In October 1989, a research-period of fifteen years, from early 1975 until late 1989, was successfully completed and laid down in her Doctoral thesis with the title 'In Search of Purification. Origin and development of encratic extreme asceticism from the beginning of Christianity till the early 13th Century AD.', Hilversum, 1989.

In May 1979 she married and had two sons, Edward (November 1980) and Christian (October 1982). From 1975 to 2001 she taught history, civics and religion at several grammar schools in the Netherlands. She enjoyed this work very much and received a lively response from her pupils. After her PhD in 1989 she continued her researches into the missing Wife of God, Sophia in Judaism, Christianity and Islam. She gave lectures and wrote articles, but did not yet feel able and confident enough to write an integrated book.

After a serious car accident in 2004, Annine finally decided to write down the outcome of many years of research on the lost divine feminine. She assembled her courage and processed the many notes and book extracts that had accumulated in a pile of boxes in her house. The book she wrote pictured the Palaeolithic Venus from 30,000 BC. through many female-friendly cultures to the Madonna at the beginning of the Christian Era. It was published in 2006 and was entitled 'From Venus to Madonna, a hidden history', The Hague, 2006. This book is a quest for the hidden feminine side of God. It investigates and finds her lost image in archaeology, art, myths and hymns. She published a third edition in 2015. For more information see webshop www.pansophia-press.nl

On September 6, 2008, she published another book 'From Sophia to Mary. The rebirth of the hidden Mother in the 21st Century', Geesteren, 2008. This book focuses on Sophia in myths, symbols, canonical and apocryphal texts and the experience of mystics throughout the world. It was a tribute to her mentor Gilles Quispel, who had passed away in March 2006. His widow, Mrs. Lien Quispel-de Langen, pointed out to her that Quispel regretted not having been able to hand over to posterity the lost divine feminine in Judaism and Christianity in a book for the general public. Annine felt it was her responsibility to structure and map out the information she had assembled from 1975 to 2008 into a general overview which was laid down in the book. Also on September 6, 2008, after a preparation period of one year by a group of 30 people, the Foundation 'Academy PanSophia, Knowledge Centre for Matriarchy and Oneness Consciousness' was set up. The Academy is the 21st century offspring of Sophia, the universal feminine side of God, who is the one with the many names. Annine is founder and chairperson of the Academy. The Academy offers series of in-depth lectures and curricula and there are plans to organise group travels abroad in the near future. Books will appear in special series in the list of the publishing house of the Academy. It has also issued several newsletters.

On September 12, 2009, her Dutch book appeared: 'Venus is not a Vamp - the female image in 35,000 years of Venus Art'. For more information see webshop www.pansophia-press.nl. Of this book appeared an English version in 2013 and a German version in 2018.
